"But I think the rule may itself be advantageously modified so as to allow of a second advance being granted in cases in which the amounts of both the advances will not together exceed what can be granted at one time. The question has not been discussed so far in any of the previous instances.

According to the prevailing practice in the Govt of India one year's advance is given in all cases.

It may also be seen from clause III of article 136 C.A.C. Volume I that advance may be made in instalments when considered desirable and when so made repayment shall commence from the 4th issue of pay after the 1st instalment is drawn but when taken in only one instalment repayment shall commence with the 1st issue of pay.

Repayment shall in both cases be completed in 2 years.

The G. of I. rule in the C.A.C. Vol I (Vide correction slip. 20 of 2.1.18) seems to allow of a second advance only for a ~~second house~~ if the 1st advance has been adjusted provided the ~~addn~~ aggregate of the 2 advances shall not exceed 12 months salary. A second advance for one and the same house is not admissible. The object of this rule is clear - Govt. assistance only to the extent needed for building a house for residence will be given. And only to increase the no. of houses available for residence will be admissible

NOTE—Contn. sheet

We may adopt the G.I. rule in Mysore ~~also~~ ~~as proposed~~.

12 months pay can be given. If he took only 6 months pay in the first instance I do not see what objection there is to give the balance of 6 months pay, whether the application for it is regarded as a second or a fresh one. The point may be cleared up.

631/1.9 N.	14 I think para 7 of Government Order of 7-2-1914 only disallows a second advance applied for after a first advance of the full admissible amount has been taken. When an officer takes only a part of the first advance, I do not think his request for the balance of the admissible amount can be regarded as an application for a second advance. In this view there will be no difficulty in dealing with cases of the kind which had given rise to this discussion and I think the existing orders do not require any amendment. Mk 8/9/19
710/10.9.19	Dewan thro 3rd member) 18/10/9 15 If para 7 of the G.O. of 1914 is interpreted in the way mentioned by the First Secy, then will no doubt be unnecessary to amend it. But I am not quite sure if it can admit of such interpretation. At any rate, as the matter does not seem to be free from doubt, I would suggest the first sentence of para 7 being modified as follows
